©cM 403 BY LAND AND AIR - By John Foster.

Old Al's auto riding is not so pleasant. He smashes into another car and then runs his own bus over the edge of the cliff.

While he is recuperating, the whole world seems to have become air minded. Cats ride by on planes, a couple of Zeps sail along and mice ride inflated bolognas. This has its effect on Al who goes into his barn and drags out his air bike.

The old farmer sails along beautifully until a bird pulls off the propeller. Then Al goes tumbling down. When he comes to, he blames it all on Waffles and chases him over the hill.

AESOP SAYS:- "THE HEIGHT OF EMBARRASSMENT IS TWO EYES MEETING THROUGH A KEY HOLE".
